Education is very important for everyone. The necessary education young people usually get at school, but there are some cases when a student gets home education instead. The reasons differ, but the outcomes coincide.

Some people consider home education to be a good thing for the children. I particularly agree with them. My opinion is that some children are too fast-developing and expanding their horizon, so studying in a class with average children may brake their possible development. If they are responsible enough, they will be able to educate themselves using informative materials and different educative resources on Internet. In that case students can pay more attention to things they are most interested in and not waste their time and energy for not so necessary subjects.

But it is true only for adult enough persons - 16 maybe years and older. If we are talking about younger children, I am convinced that if they have no socialization problems, it is more suitable for them to attend school. There they learn to communicate in a team, contact them (teachers) and make friends for the following life years. That is what people objecting to home education say, and I particularly agree with them too.

Yet we cannot deny that for some children it is more comfortable to study at home and communicate with their friends outside the school in spare time, so actually home studies may be more reasonable.

The question whether home education is good or bad is still quite controversial, so parents thinking of such a decision should listen to their children and take their opinion in account.
